

Spiranthes romanzoffiana (hooded ladies tresses)

- Small, terrestrial, perennial herb in the Orchid family.
- Occurs in small populations in grassy wet meadows, in North America and the British Isles.
- Locally rare in the Tualatin Mountains and the Willamette Valley, it was discovered here at Hoyt Arboretum in 2011.
- Volunteer citizen scientists are studying the biology and ecology of this orchid and are monitoring populations to ensure the long-term persistence of this species.

Hoyt
Arboretum
a museum of living trees

For more information visit
<http://www.hoytarboretum.org>